

ALSO, for 2010 and beyond mention in nwslltr that goes out June 29th tht the lineup form on the web changes to have the 5th starter also go on the top line of the bullpen from July 1st thru July 17th. (Copy note from e sent to all 7/1/09)

Hi Again: The All Star break is coming up in two weeks. As an early reminder, that week, since the first MLB games won't be starting until Thursday July 16th, the deadline for any new lineups or trades you send in for that week's games won't be until Thursday afternoon July 16th.

 This week we've printed a short list of 'Scoresheet All-Stars' and 'Scoresheet All-Worsts'. We took all of the players in the majors, and totaled the won-loss records for all of the teams that they are on in Scoresheet, and then divided by the number of teams they play on to come up with their 'average Scoresheet won-loss record.' Most pennant races are decided by just a couple of games, so if a single player makes the difference in 3 or 4 games that is a big deal.

This list is not just an order of the players who are having the best (and worst) seasons, but more shows players who are playing much better or worse than what they 'cost' (how high the draft pick used to get them, or what they cost in trade).

*Note A player such as Emilio Bonifacio or Felipe Paulino may show on a league's 'Worst' list because he was not picked until the mid-season supplemental draft in many leagues. Those drafts go in the reverse order of won-loss records, and since Paulino was a top supplemental pick in many leagues, he did end up getting picked by a lot of teams that already had a losing record when they got him.
