

Scoresheet Fantasy Sports Begins Weekly Video Podcast

Experts and other Scoresheet team owners will be featured in podcast covering the world of fantasy sports.

Grass Valley (I-Newswire) May 23, 2011 - Scoresheet Fantasy Sports, provider of the most realistic fantasy baseball, fantasy football, and fantasy hockey games available, announced its first foray into the world of podcasting. The Scoresheet Fantasy Sports weekly video podcast will feature tips and insights from experts as well as Scoresheet team owners.

“The podcast gives us a way to provide timely tips and information to Scoresheet owners and fantasy sports fans anywhere in the world,” said Scoresheet Fantasy Sports co-founder Jeff Barton. The first episode, covering the often asked question of how Scoresheet got started 25 years ago, is available on iTunes and other podcast directories as well as the Scoresheet website.

Each week’s show will cover timely topics on the current in-season sports. Experts from the fantasy sports world will be a regular part of the podcast, as will some of the top Scoreseheet team owners, offering their unique perspective on what it takes to field a championship team.

To learn more about the Scoresheet Fantasy Sports podcast or to subscribe, visit www.scoresheet.com/podcasts.

About Scoresheet Fantasy Sports:

Scoresheet Fantasy Sports launched in 1987 with its hallmark fantasy baseball sim and quickly acquired a devoted following. Scoresheet Football launched in 1989, followed by Scoresheet Hockey and a winter baseball game using players from past seasons. Players can join alone or with a group in either single season or keeper leagues. Scoresheet has a league for every fantasy sports fan.

Company Contact Information

Scoresheet Fantasy Sports

Jeff Barton

PO Box 1097

95945

Phone : 530-470-1880